

Course Schedule - Spring 2006

Anthropology

160 Contemporary Social Issues Credit: 3 hours.

Course considers how anthropological theory and methods enhance our understanding of contemporary social and political issues, including immigration, education, affirmative action, and welfare. It examines the relationship between social policy and social science knowledge, and the juxtapositioning of anthropological, policy, and other analytical approaches to contemporary issues. It assesses the strengths and limits of anthropological knowledge (its qualitative, ethnographic, and narrative character) for addressing these issues.

This course satisfies the General Education Criteria for a UIUC Social Sciences, and US Minority Culture(s) course.
